

Have you found a child nearby who looks they are in trouble after running away from home?

Case 6: A runaway child becomes a victim of sexual exploitation —A method of taking advantage of a child's message showing a desire to run away from home

(1) A child looked for a person to rely on by posting a message on social media

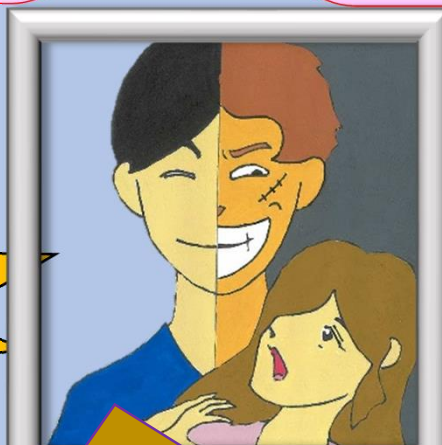

When the child posted a message on social media about the desire to run away from home, a man who lived in a remote place replies, saying "You can stay at my home" and "You can forget your trouble for a while."

Run away from home

(2) The child was taken into the man's home and threatened

When the child boldly ran away from home to meet the man who replied, he said kind words to the child, and the child went to his home. Upon arriving his home, he suddenly changed his attitude, and threatened the child, saying "I have an acquaintance in a bōryokudan (organized crime group)."

It is a vile crime that treats a person like a commodity!

(4) The child was deprived of money and continued to be victimized for a long time

The child was deprived of almost all money earned by compensated dating (prostitution) and was often treated violently. As the child was staying in a strange place and had no means of communication, the child had no choice but to do what the man said, and continued to be victimized for a long time.

Result

(3) The child was forced to engage in compensated dating

The child was told to engage in compensated dating (prostitution) for the reason of earning their living. The child could not escape because the man deprived the child of their smartphone and kept monitoring their behavior.
